Intelligence

Research shows that your intelligence is an important predictor of the success that you will achieve in your work. This is due to the fact that your intelligence is linked to the way you process information. How you process information determines the best way for you to tackle things in your work. This allows you to provide the best results and to derive the most enjoyment out of your work.

Below, you can see your score on the intelligence test and an explanation of the best way for you to manage things in your work.

Overall score

Score: Above average

Compared to a reference group of highly educated individuals, you have an above average score on the intelligence test. It will generally take you less time to process new, complex information.

This means that you will probably need little time to prepare in your work, and become acquainted with the subject matter. Look for a complicated task every now and then, to continue to challenge yourself.

Focus on things that appeal to you and that suit you. In order to find out what these things are, you can complete the Mini personality measurement and/or the Mini motivations test.
